Stovall in Griff's Class; Will Sign Youngsters

Manager of the Browns Will Look to the Future—Is in Full Charge.

OTHER SPORTING COMMENT

By WILLIAM FERT.

The time is not far distant when other clubs in the American League will have to quit Kichy the Browns around.
George Stovall is pursuing exactly the same policy as that adopted by Clark Griffith, viz. building up his club with young players, and looking to the future.
It has been claimed that Wallace O'Connor, and McAlister, who took a shot at managing the Browns, were all handicapped because Owner Hedges did not show a disposition to spend money for players.
According to Stovall, such a condition of affairs does not exist at present. "When I took the reins," Stovall said, "I made it plain that unless money was spent for young players I could do nothing, and would not attempt the job. Hedges promised to spend the necessary coin for talent and also to back me up in every move I made, and not to interfere. In other words, I was to be left entirely in charge, and thus far the owner of the club has kept his word." Stovall said already gathered around him the nucleus for a mighty good ball club. He has no Walter Johnson, Hal Chase, Ty Cobb, or Joe Jackson enrolled, but his men are all hustling hard, and since the club has been East they have given every opponent a stiff argument.
Next season, with Stovall at the helm, there may be a big surprise party in store for some of the other American League clubs.

Rain put the ball yard on the blink yesterday afternoon, and the game had to be called off. Two games will be played this afternoon, the first starting promptly at 2 o'clock. Bob Groom will probably work the first game and Carl Cashion the second for the Nationals. Hamilton and Charley Frazier will probably be the men selected by Stovall.

Tommy Rice, the former Washington baseball writer, now doing time on the Brooklyn Eagle, heard Bob Groom the following compliment: How can you sit up a pitcher with any certainty? The dogged persistency with which John J.
McGraw stuck to Rube Marquard while the Rube was considered the biggest golf stick in the league has become a legend.
Another case of the same sort is Bob Groom, the Washington pitcher.
Groom had never done anything in particular for Washington until this season, yet every manager who saw him said that he had the makings of a sure enough winner. They declared he had a side-arm delivery that was a wonder and could not understand why he did not attain greater success. Such comment caused the club to hold him onto and this season he is delivering the goods.

Bill Kimball threatens to go West with the Nationals on their next trip.
"There's a red light on the track," he says.

With the lively ball it seems as if the turn of the modern game sets as strongly toward batting out as it does to sacrifice when the other side is two runs ahead.
The law of chances this season thus far has been to hit and run play as opposed to the sacrifice. With a dead ball the reverse would probably be the case.

England calls us "potential professionals" because here or there some athlete may eventually take advantage of his athletic education to become a coach; but for one that eventuates thus there are thousands who never dream of turning professional.
Great Britain is, as usual, jealous of the Americans. They have failed because they lack system in everything that concerns their sports. For that reason they are decrying the very things that make us successful: Application and attention to detail.

Says a Philadelphia exchange: Bob Groom, the Washington Senator's "tooth-pick" mound artist, who is pitching the best game of his career so far this season, is a regular Chinese puzzle to the heaviest swatters.
Every time the Senators play the Detroit Tigers and Groom is slated to pitch, Ty Cobb and Sam Crawford twist their faces into about twenty-seven different varieties.

Long Bob has undoubtedly the widest break in his pitching in either league, and Cobb and Crawford are pulling all of them for this sort of ball than any other. As a result, this pair generally foul out or strike out.

Our old friend Collins does not like Groom's twirling very much, either.
When Bob gets them working right he generally has the left hand hitters pulling away, no matter how good they are.
So after making one or two over, the Washington lad mixes them with a slow one, and generally the mighty slugger misjudges his last chance by either swinging too soon or catching the put-down near the handle for an easy out.

Ping Bodie, the famous Italian fence breaker of the White Sox, is also a sort one for Bob.

The following is from the pen of Hugh Fullerton, the well-known Chicago baseball writer:

OBSCURATION.
He could fold like a sheet and hit like a Cobb; He could make a double and a home run;
He could make a hit and a home run;
He could make a hit and a home run;
He could make a hit and a home run;
He could make a hit and a home run;

The tale of the baseball's oldest ad: The lighter we boost them, the harder they fall.

A baseball fan slips over the following:
"The Browns are favorites for the sen-tation pentathlon and the cellar de-cation."

Sporting Editor Herald: Please publish the record for circling the bases.
JACK D.

Answer—Robert, of Cincinnati, circled the bases in Cincinnati, October 11, 1910, in 22-45 seconds.

Frank Robinson is some race pitcher.
He has jumped in and won two games on successive days.

DOUBLE-HEADER TO-DAY.

The Nationals and Browns will hook up to-day in a double-header, first game starting promptly at 2 o'clock. Bob Groom and Carl Cashion will more than likely be the hurlers selected by Manager Griffith to do the pitching, while Manager Stovall may send young Hamilton and Jack Powell to the mound.

CHICAGO SHARES WITH PHILLIES

Cravath Steals Home in Eleventh Inning of First Game with Winning Run.

Chicago, July 18.—The Cubs and Phillies split a double-header this afternoon, the first game, an eleven-inning affair, going to Philadelphia, 3 to 2, and the Cubs taking the second, 4 to 2. Cravath stole home on LeVander with the winning run in the opener. Chicago made twenty-one hits for a total of twenty-seven bases—seventeen of the hits of Brennan, who was replaced by Seaton in the ninth.
Seaton and Roubach hooked-up in the second game. Philadelphia picked Roubach for two tallies in the opening round and that was all. In the fourth Seaton and Evans made home runs after two were out and tied it up. A pass to Leach and three singles in the sixth, settled the result for the Cubs. Score:
